

FLAGSTAFF.

The Capitol of a Resourceful County.

Coconino county, of which Flagstaff is the capitol, is a vast area occupying the northern central part of Arizona and embracing within its boundaries the most diverse material resources and the most interesting natural wonders and prehistoric remains of any equal area upon the face of the globe. In the far north and surrounding the Grand Canyon, "the only natural wonder which does not disappoint," stretches the Coconino forest, a vast pine belt of superior quality, from which not one tree has been converted into lumber for commerce. In the same locality are also extensive copper, gold and silver mines, onyx of superior quality and other minerals.

In the lower portions of this county are the extensive lumbering plants of the Territory, the only mills of any considerable size between the middle states and the Pacific coast. This locality is also the center of the cattle and sheep industries of the Territory, interests which involve hundreds of thousands of dollars in their annual operations. Here, too, are situated the well-known red sandstone quarries, from which stone has been taken for all the best buildings in Colorado, Utah, Arizona and California and for many eastern cities. Besides all these advantages, Flagstaff has a summer climate of unsurpassed attractiveness. It offers to the health-seeker of less fortunate climes an equable climate at all seasons, entirely free from miasmatic influences and all injurious agencies. Its widely varying altitudes afford any required temperature, while its picturesque mountain regions are a generous and ever absorbing feast for the esthetic sense.

RAILROAD FACILITIES.

Traversing Coconino county from east to west along the lower geographical limit is the Santa Fe Pacific railway, one of the great transcontinental lines. A branch line connecting Flagstaff with the Grand Canyon and traversing the extensive mineral and forest lands to the north is already surveyed and will be completed within the near future.

With these lines of communication there are also many stage and freight lines extending in every direction, many of them reaching almost to the Utah border, 200 miles to the north.

The site of the city of Flagstaff is well taken, alike for sanitary and scenic considerations. It occupies the lower slopes of the San Francisco peaks in the midst of pine forests, abundantly watered and well drained. The town numbers about 3,000 population, is regularly laid out, has numerous fine church edifices, school buildings, an astronomical observatory, a fine court house and jail and many pretentious commercial and residence structures.

While Flagstaff must depend upon its material resources for its continued growth and development, at the same time the tourist influx annually to visit the Grand Canyon, the Cliff and Cave Dwellings, the Moqui snake dance and other attractions, together with the greater influx of health-seekers who visit that bracing and recruiting climate leave large sums of money with hostleries, stage lines and mercantile outfitters.—Los Angeles Herald.

A Cure for Bilious Colic.

RESOURCE, Screven Co., Ga.—I have been subject to attacks of bilious colic for several years. Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea remedy is the only sure relief. It acts like a charm. One dose of it gives relief when all other remedies fail.—G. D. Sharp. For sale at D. J. Brannen's drug store.

A cornfield poet got off the following: "Bury the croaker out in the woods in a beautiful hole in the ground, where the bumblebees bumble and the straddlebugs straddle around. He's no good to the town of push; too impracticable, too stingy, too dead, but he wants the whole earth and part of the crust, and stars that shine overhead. Then hurry him off to the bumblebee's nest, and bury him deep in the ground, for he's no use to us here; get him out of the way and make room for the man that's sound."

As True As Gospel.

A man that can be flattered is not necessarily a fool, but you can make one of him.

A laugh, to be joyous must flow from a joyous heart, for without kindness there can be no true joy.

The failures in life come from resting in good intentions, which are in vain unless carried out in wise action.

Only the brave know how to forgive; it is the most refined and generous pitch of virtuous human nature can arrive at.

The most exquisite times in most people's lives are those when they are (perhaps unconsciously) expecting something.

Love has no commandment. She does all, and delays not. It is enough to her that it is only shown her; she needs no driving.

Absence lessens small passions and increases great ones as the wind extinguishes the taper and kindles the burning dwelling.

It is more honorable to the head, as well as to the heart, to be misled in our eagerness in the pursuit of truth than to be safe from blundering by contempt of it.

That which we acquired with the most difficulty we retain the longest; as those who have earned a fortune are usually more careful of it than those who have inherited it.

A Public Benefactor.

Mr. Smithkins (drawing up his will) —"To the Pokeville home for incurables I leave and bequeath the sum of ten thousand dollars; to the Pokeville orphan asylum, forty thousand dollars; to the Pokeville Baptist church, five thousand dollars; to start a town library in the town of Pokeville, ten thousand dollars; to the"—

Mrs. Smithkins—"Goodness me! are you crazy? You ain't worth ten cents and you know it."

Mr. Smithkins—"Oh, shut up and lemme alone! I'm going to take this will round to the president of the Pokeville national bank and have him witness it. I've got to overdraw my account there for twenty-seven dollars next week."

"My boy came home from school one day with his hand badly lacerated and bleeding, and suffering great pain," says Mr. E. J. Schall, with Meyer Bros. Drug Co., St. Louis, Mo. "I dressed the wound, and applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm freely. All pain ceased, and in a remarkably short time it healed without leaving a scar. For wounds, sprains, swellings and rheumatism I know of no medicine or prescription equal to it. I consider it a household necessity." The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale at D. J. Brannen's drug store.
